No. Propaga Holl in the City of Victoria Hanglong.—

No questions being asked, the chairman proposed, seconded by Mr. Layton, that the report of the general agents, and the accounts be passed, which was carried unanimously.

The Chairman proposed that the Hon. P. Ryrie, Messrs. H. L. Dalrymple, W. H. F. Darby, C. D. Bottomley, and F. D. Sassoon be elected members of the consulting committee until the next general meeting. Mr. T. Jackson seconded the proposal which was also carried.

Messrs, Coxon and MacEwen were proposed by Mr. Ruttonice, seconded by Mr. Foster, as auditors for the company, and duly elected. This concluded the formal business of the meet-

Mr. Jackson proposed a vote of thanks to the general agents, consulting committee, and officers of the company, to which Mr. Johnson briefly replied on behalf of the general agents, when the meeting terminated.

THE CHINESE IMPERIAL NAVAL BAND CONCERT.

This Band, which arrived here some days from Tientsin for the purpose of giving concerts in aid of the Yellow River sufferers, gave their first musical entertainment at the Public Garden this afternoon, the 25th inst. which, entirely composed of Chinese, is under the tutorship of a foreigner. The bandsmen number twenty-two; their musical instructor is Mr. Bigel, a native of Alsace, and they are under the special patronage of Li Hungchang. This band was organized three years ago and the progress which the pupils have made since, reflects great credit on their tutor. It must have been a very difficult and tedious task to teach these men the first 'rudiments of music. Although the art. of music in China is of very ancient date, (it being so far traceable to the year 2240 B.C. during the reign of Emperor Yu, who issued a decree, encouraging the study and practice of music), so even at the present day the most skilful Chinese musicians know little or nothing of an abstract theory, and very few only are acquainted with the principles of notation, time or tune. The Chinese prefer their own simple melodies to the finest European music. They will seemingly watch with great interest the performance of a European band, but then, whilst doing so, their curiosity is only roused by the strange form of our musical instruments and the fingering which puzzles them to a stil greater extent. European music passes by their ears and has no effect on their nature, although the abominable scratching on a Chinese fidd brings all their vital spirits in motion. One of the greatest difficulties which had to be over come by teaching these men was Guido's gamut. The Chinese have two scales of notes in use one of the so called "Southern" which is characterised, like the early Scotch and Irish, by the absence of the fourth and seventh; the other scale is the so called "Northern" in which the

Now a word or two about the execution of the programme. The instruments used by the bandsmen are all brass instruments, arranged after the French system, it having been found that reed-instruments were too difficult for their use. The programme included operatic, dance, sacred and even Chinese music, and therefore gave listeners ample opportunity to judge as to the band's effectiveness. All pieces were executed in a very creditable style and Mr. Bigel | coming sensible of the mistake, for instead of must have had more than ordinary perseverance reaping new glories at an infinitesimal expense to accomplish such a task. is something more to be apprehended than the vindication of British interests, for many a shell would destroy property owned in Berlin as well as London, and all the world knows that Prince such an occurrence as that. It is only by the exercise of a wise discretion and self-restraint that France and Germany even now are prevented from flying at each other.

The attack on Hue and its immediate effects are now attributed by some French politicians to an excess of zeal on the part of patriots and warriors intent upon carrying out those ideas o colonisation with which the minds of their public men are inflamed, and who had not duly considered the consequences. The treaty extorted from the new King gave the sole protectorate over Annam to the French, and if it had been allowed to stand it would have been a valuable acquisition to the invaders; but the Chinese came to the front at once, determined upon the maintenance of their own suzerainty, and backing that determination by ordering 15,000 of their regular soldiers to the Tonquin border. M. Challemel Lacour was quickly undeceived about the possibility of an easy conquest, Lord Granville, on kindly thoughts intent, appears to have succeeded in effecting a personal reconciliation between the French Minister and the Chinese Ambassador, and re-opening negotiations for peace. The first consequence is a series of propositions suitable for the purpose, but very different from the concessions demanded in the Treaty of Hue. Their acceptance would be humiliating to the vanity which contemplated entire submission and a vast surrender, but what else can be done? Our English Minister for Foreign Affairs could not be otherwise than moved by the uneasiness which had appeared among the British mercantile interests, and the The Band is the first and only one in existence fall that has taken place in the funds. The markets for silk and tea, chief articles of China produce, and for cotton goods and lead amongst the productions of this country, of which large demands are made from the Celestial Empire, already indicate coming disturbance in the event of hostilities, into which Great Britain would certainly be drawn. We do not think -that-at-the-worst-the-tea-trade-would-suffer-tothe same extent as in 1859, on the occurrence of the China-War, when the price of teas advanced between 40 and 50 per cent.; for although there is a still increasing demand, for the article new sources of supply are open to us.

We should have to submit, no doubt, to largely advanced prices, for tea is become an article of necessity in domestic life, and whilst obtainable by any means the required price would be paid for it. The imports of tea last year amounted to no less than 212,000,000lb., 156,000,000lb., of which were received from China, 2,000,000lb., from Japan and Java, and 54,000,000lb., from India. These Indian supplies, it is believed, could be increased to a great extent under the influence of demand; so that even were it possible for the French to blockade the Chinese ports (an improbable event, seeing that the coast extends for some three thousand miles), the other ten-producing countries would be able to send a large supply. The English demand, has developed tea production in India very considerably within the last quarter of a century, and a steady increase in public estimation of the Assam, Darjeeling, and other qualities of British Indian teas renders it likely that any serious interruption of the China trade by the proceedings of France would increase the relative importance of India as a source of supply. We should have to pay more for our tea, and be satisfied with a less quantity; but we should not, in any event, be altogether without it, and i is scarcely probable that the ports would remain. closed until it should be the pleasure of the enemy of China to open them.

The French Government went wrong from the time it first assumed an aggressive attitude and a policy of annexation to make colonies as certain sources of national_wealth. The people are beface with the ugly question to be determined of quin affair, establish a Protectorate (which meant territory; but now, as M. Wo are not at war with China, and we may tell the Government that this war may be avoided, and that France ought to strive hard to avoid 'it." These must be unpleasant words for M. Challemel Lacour and his bellicose friends to hear, yet he is still supported by a fierce war spirit that commands him to go on in spite of warnings and remonstrances. Hongkong, Wednesday, October 31, 1883

In the general excitement caused by the Tonquin embroglio and the late anti-foreign riots at Canton, the international questions raised by the German Government in the arbitrary proceedings of its representatives at Swatow in connection with the celebrated land dispute at that port, have been temporarily lost sight of. We use the word temporarily as the matters now, or lately, under diplomatic negotiations are of far too great importance to the dignity of the Chinese Empire to be allowed to be permanently shelved. The fill judged action of the German local officials in forgetting or ignoring the existence of the Tsung-li Yamen, and in so injudiciously and unnecessarily over-riding the vital principles of international law extent of setting at naught the authority of the Chinese Government within its own territory, was far too gross an infringement of the comity which governs the relations between great nations, too grave an insult to China's independence, to be hastily thrown aside. Our Yokohama contemporary the Japan Mail, which on-several occasions has ably and impartially dealt with the question, in a recent issue says:—

"We hear from Swatow that the recent disturbances in Canton have seriously impeded the amicable settlement of the now famous land question in the former port. It was reported some weeks ago that a conclave of magistrates, together with one or two representatives of Das Heilige Deutsche Reich were to reconsider the claim of Mesers. Dircks & Co., ex primordio; but it now seems that the Viceroy of Canton has indefinitely postponed the solution of the Swatow difficulties until affairs in Canton shall have resumed a more peaceable aspect. There is no doubt; however, that the commotion at Canton and the real or pretended inability of the Chinese authorities to keep the populace within bounds will materially increase the difficulty of arranging the Swatow, affair satisfactorily. The Gernan Government has thoroughly endorsed the proceedings bl. its representatives so and there can be no question that it intends to protect the claims of Messrs. Dircks & Co., to the fullest extent."

We are, of course, not in the confidence of the Japan Mail, and consequently are not buildings thereon, your petitioner in conformity with your Honours order begs to be provided in a position to judge of the bond fides of the information on which the statements in ownership. the above paragraph are based; but we do happen to know that, so far as the Chinese officials are concerned, the matter has long since been removed from the Jurisdiction of the Swatow magistrates and placed in the hands of no less a personage than the Grand Secretary, LI Hung CHANG, Viceroy of the Two Kwang, what course to pursue; and we likewise have read, and Swatow-indeed as Kwok had at the same session of the land by force was as ill adthe arbitrary and illegal acts of its consular representatives in Swatow, without hesitation disavowed such unjustifiable proceedings and expressed regret that to disturb the harmonious relations existing between Germany and China.

There can be no manner of doubt that the German Government will protect the claims of Messrs. Direcks & Co. against the Chinese authorities to the fullest extent-but only so far as those claims are entitled to, and capable of being supported in accordance with international law generally, and whatever Chinese laws may specially apply to the matters in dispute. Let us as succinctly as possible detail and analyse the principal points at issue in this Swatow Land Question.

The case arose out of a claim by Messrs Directs & Co. to a piece of land adjacent to the Chao Chao Maritime Customs Tidewaiters House which Messrs: Directs & Co. stated they had purchased from Kwo their Compradore. The authorities refused toregister the transfer from Kwoto Direcks & Co. as the land never belonged to Kwo. Now it is obvious that Kwo could not sell what did not belong to him, and that Messrs, Directs & Co. could not pretend that the land belonged to them until the deed was registered and the authorities had, acknowled Kwo's right to the land. The transfer not having been completed by registration must be looked upon as a mere contract to sell, if Kwo could establish any right to the land, and the case should therefore be regarded merely as a Chinese, case and one to be tried by the Chinese authorities. Kwo being the claimant and the Chinese Government the owners in possession (the land being Kwanti) and the utmost right that the German authorities could claim would be to be allowed to be present at the trial to satisfy themselves that the case was fairly tried. Even if the German firm were admitted to be the actual purchasers, they could not properly ask any further right, as the Treaty between China and Germany in providing for mixed geases does not provide for claims by foreigners against the Chinese Governg this be regarded as a mixed case. The German Treaty of 1880 provides that the mode of dealing with mixed cases is to be the subject of further discussion, and in such cases, it is reasonable to assume that the rules laid down in section II of the Chefoo Convention would be adopted by the Chinese Government. There can be no question that it would be detrimental to the interests of China to allow any foreign powerto interfere between the Chinese Govern--mentiand its own-subjects, and particularly. dangerous to allow foreigners to buy up claims were good-to obtain better rights as well as in diplomatic circles, belongs to than the Chinese themselves possess. Such | the Chinese Government, authorities, might have led to disastrous results. The facts of the case can be stated in a few -words.—East-of-the Haikwan-Customs pro-perty at Swatow there is a piece of Kwantl Government ground, which was filled in by the native Customs about 18 years ago and which is now crossed by a footpath and road, the existence of which are explained below. Kwok, the Compradors of Messrs, Dincks & Co. claims a plece of this ground and bases his claim on a Deed.

At the time of the filling in, three boundary stones were crected, marking the limits of the Customs reclamation, and-two-of-these-boundary-stones-still exist on the west side, plainly showing that the ground in dispute touches the Haikwan Customs property. Two proclamations were issued several years ago forbidding any further filling in of the ground. It is noteworthy that the present Haikwan Customs property was purchased from Directs & Co. and Kwok in two lots, and the last purchase, according to a deed of sale, was made in 1869, when the ground east of the Customs was described as Kwan Ti, thus plainly showing that both Kwok and Messrs. Dincks & Co., must have been fully aware at that date to whom the land belonged. In 1867 some correspondence took place in relation to a footpath which crossed the government ground and which the Customs authorities were desirous of connecting with one of their gates. A letter was then written acknowledging Kwox's title-to-some ground at the rear of the Customs, but not to the eastward. In 1871 some further correspondence en-And here the question arises—should sued about the construction of a road across the ground, which shows that the foreign community at that time were generally under the impression that the land belonged to the Chinese Government It certainly seems strange if Kwok had blind" for $10 into the Government "pool" any real claim to this ground, that he this morning, with the prospect of "covering should have allowed it to rest for so many years. Has any person a dread of the income-tax collector or water-rate man? Do any of our readers require new suits of clothes and cannot get them? Is anyone afflicted with too much mother-in-law? If so, there is hope, relief and sympathy. The following is a copy of an advertisement lately published. The names only are suppressed:

ALONE YET NOT ALONE.—To him or her who is desolate, lonely or forsaken. A clergyman of the Church of England, who for nearly fifty years has observed and experienced the hardness of mankind, and (in many cases) of people professing to be religious, yearns to give counsel and a brother's sympathy to those who sorsly need it. He has no money to bestow, but the most dejected and dispirited, those who, rightly or wrongly, feel themselves to be the suthors of their own sorrow, and those who will meet them at any place in London, and at any here who will meet them at any place in London, and at any hour that is consistent with his engagements. He will not seek to know the name of any one who applies to him, and who may wish to withhold it.

We have dillgently pendered over this trifle, but cannot, as the Americans say, "get the hang of it." When we have a man without money "yearning to give counsel " free and without cost, and no questions asked, we do not know whether to pity or admire him. Any way, he must be an exceedingly nice man to advertise in this way simply for the benefit of mankind. Is he a book agent in disguise, or a real doubledistilled philanthropist?

SPEAKING of the alleged discovery in America of a herb called Hoang-nan, which is claimed to be an infallible antidote for hydrophobia, and all diseases to which humanity is subject, the London Standard relates this story : Twenty years ago, a Chinese doctor-or a barbarian who personated that character, created something like a furore in San Francisco. He prescribed for every disease, at the same time enjoining a strict regimen, without which his medicines would not only fail to cure, but would actually kill. The result was miraculous. Epicures bore with equanimity a sentence of rice water and dry toast, in terror of and ladies who turned day into night recovered when they followed his implicit directions, unconscious that the physic was simply a means for frightening the patients into obedience to the bygienic appliances, which accompanied it. A similar tale is told of the Anamite plant, which cures all or kills those who recklessly abuse its virtues, and the student of folk-lore does not need to be reminded that the identical properties are attributed to all the ordeal drugs which form so prominent a feature in the rude jurisprudence of inner Africa.
